The Silicon Valley Cycling Foundation ("SVCF") was created exclusively to foster national and international amateur sports competition. SVCF will support and develop amateur female cyclists that show the potential to perform well at national and international cycling competitions with the objective of developing potential contenders for the Olympic Games and for other international events including the Pan-American Games. Eight to twelve female athletes will be selected annually for support from the Foundation. These athletes will be provided access to daily training advice, daily training rides and specific clinics to develop their riding skills to the level necessary for international competition.
